

An Open Letter, to those who have tried to understand ES and tried to help.
(for both, there is a way...)

A page on Christianity (following, and explained at the top) deals with a central issue, which I think explains our difficulty trying to communicate. ES is incompatible with the imagery sustaining our culture's beliefs. Instinct preserves the culture, which locks us into the past. Except for that, ES would be quite simple to understand.

The page on the 90° Spiral shows the missing key to the ES proof, where the Spiral and ES fit in nature, and why neither has been discovered before.

At the end of this letter is a statement about the help needed next. The rest, following, may give you some idea of what I have had to face.

I have felt deeply, since the beginning, that ES is not my job. It is the responsibility of those who by training, profession, social position and public expectation have made it their responsibility - to understand human nature and see what is going wrong and clearly why - to notice the universal models of how all nature works - how atoms are created, and naturally congregate into viable living organisms, and what that of course has to do with our own behavior - to notice the relationship between storms and human wars, nature's underlying Creative power, and what that has to do with where our sense of God came from, what instead sustains it now; and why, then, Science teaches disintegration as the way of the universe, denying both Creation and the perpetual motion of our atoms as impossible - to notice our dis-integration of knowledge, the inverse sense we are making, how nature clearly does not work, and what that has to do with our compounding problems of pollution, violence, etc, etc.

All this can be reduced to a simple understanding: a model of an atom, ourselves, and nature's way of creating limitless energy, self-regulated and self controlled - our future; our future selves - if we care.

Instead of helping, the professionals we entrust for answers (and what to believe), including writers, publishers, physicians, people in public office, etc, have all stood like rock against their own or anyone else's possible understanding, or caring about ES, making my task impossible. We are now ten years further down the road of global self-destruction. Nothing has changed. All doors to understanding why are locked.

We are in far more serious trouble than anyone seems to realize or care to face. I have certain skills others apparently do not have, and have offered them toward the task we all must face. They were rejected, are rejected as unneeded and unnecessary. I came with a thing of beauty to share, and met The Argument. My turned to a sack of lead. So to those with some sense of the importance of ES to us all, I explained I could not continue without some shared excitement (the model of that universal truth being everywhere about me) - that the success or failure of this effort is not just up to me, but equally up to you. Nothing came back, nothing comes back, no real understanding, no real caring, no excitement, no way to share ES.

The disillusionment runs now to the marrow of my bones and all joy in the project is gone. I am down to one last model to make and some experiments to try with it. If that yields nothing, I am done. The 90° spiral is the solution, but after ten years of locked doors and uncaring, the solution to what, for the proof of what? I've already proved my point. The reaction is paralysis.