

With the proof, or without it, either way I will have failed. There has been no communication. The physical proof of ES leads only to further escape from the issue and the physics leads only to further capacity for violence. Caring simply does not run deep enough to get past the painful truth to what could otherwise be.

If you are moved to change the outcome I would welcome some help, but I am weary of empty words of caring that lead nowhere. And I have had to defend myself against hope in order to survive, just as you have done.

ES is not the sort of thing one can publish as an "item of interest" or the sort of instant information we are now accustomed to. There are many reasons why it seems difficult to understand, and many more reasons why even if understood it would be rejected or ignored. The present rhetoric of "concern" steers well clear of the central issue and writes good reasons, but if there is no way to face it, we face the end of the line: the collapse of life's supporting ecosystem, mass starvation, the Holocaust. The signals are everywhere apparent, and as things stand, ES can only hasten the process. We think good words of concern are action. They are not.

So I should warn that any effective help would take a commitment deep enough to try, and fail, and try again - to learn for yourself what we are indeed up against, and the true depth of the problem. In all the years only one person has tried with such a commitment, and he consistently ran into the same locked doors and rejection I have found. It is not my lack of skill as a writer that stands in the way but something far more serious in the general condition of every educated human. With caring, that could be changed, but the time for it is rapidly passing.

Perhaps that does not concern you. I neither expect nor ask the necessary commitment from you. Somewhere there is one who, following their nature and deepest caring, can bring to the task what is needed. From there a chain reaction of growing excitement could begin. But that is not a door I can open, nor do I have any way to find the one who could.

Perhaps there is where you could help, trying to find the one who could help. Perhaps it is easier to let come what may.

ES is fighting with the primal forces of both nature and human ignorance, and the price of involvement could well be your life. Instinct says don't get involved, which gives your future to me to determine. I am left to do the ES proof, and let come what may.

Alfred
5.86

PS: The 90° Spiral is not for discussion with others. It is confidential, and very important that I know who knows about it. Quite aside from ES, the Spiral is an extremely valuable new tool for analysis of storms, biological growth, fluid flows, etc. More open indicates acceleration; more closed indicates deceleration. The precise 90° Spiral defines the exact centerline of motion toward which all flows in nature gravitate. The Spiral makes a beautiful new drafting tool: by simple rotation the scale is infinitely adjustable.

For an inventor, the rule is "Publish and Perish" - one can lose all right to one's invention. Also, without the Spiral, even if the ES proof is seen and photographed it could not be reproduced. The Spiral is for those who care to face the central issue.